Preface

The Native American Initiative (NEI) is a collaborative effort among the nation's regional educational laboratories (RELs), which are funded by the Office of Educational Research and Improvement, U.S. Department of Education. This initiative began in 1992 under the leadership of McREL (Mid-continent Regional Educational Laboratory). The foundation for the NEI consists of two nationally significant reports: (1) Indian Nations at Risk and (2) White House Conference on Indian Education: Final Report. The overall purpose of NEI is to follow through with the recommendations contained in these reports that pertain to education. More specifically, NEI strives to collaborate with Indian educators and organizations; gather and disseminate information on resources and promising programs for Native Americans; promote professional development of teachers and administers on multicultural issues generally and Native education in particular; and institutionalize the involvement of Native Americans in the work of the RELs. This regional directory is a significant part of this overall effort.

The RELs participating in the Native Education Initiative first assisted in identifying resources for the following national directory:

> Native Education Directory: Organizations and Resources for Educators of Native Peoples of the United States and Territories (1993). Charleston, WV: ERIC Clearinghouse on Rural Education and Small Schools

Published by the Appalachia Educational Laboratory (AEL) in its role as the ERIC Clearinghouse on Rural Education and Small Schools, the national directory may be obtained by contacting:

> Appalachia Educational Laboratory
> P. O. Box 1348
> Charleston WV 25325
> (800) 624-9120

The Organizations and Resources for Educators of Native Americans in the North Central Region is an outgrowth of the Native Education Directory. As is the case with all attempts to develop a comprehensive directory, this document is by no means complete. We believe, however, that the resources identified herein represent a significant, useful cross section of government (tribal, federal, and state) and community-based resource agencies and organizations.

Information contained in this directory was developed with the assistance of the Midwest Regional Center for Drug-Free Schools and Communities through personal networks of community-based and public institution contacts. Identifying key individuals in each state to corroborate information, as well as add new material, was crucial to making this directory as current as possible.

Users of this directory will find that many resources listed, particularly tribal governments, may be contacted for information on topics beyond education. Economic development, law, social welfare, contracting, and planning are but a small sample of additional offices found within tribal government structures. Likewise, Indian community-based organizations often have contracts or programs to address a variety of issues.

Public schools with ten or more Indian students are eligible for Title V, U.S. Department of Education, Office of Indian Education funding. These projects range from simple tutorial programs to teaching and student support programs. For lists of Title V public school projects in your state, you may contact the Office of Indian Education, Jon Wade, Acting Director, (202) 401-1887.

The other major source of Indian education funding is found within the U.S. Department of Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, Office of Indian Education Programs. The key contact is Dr. John Tippeconnic, Director, (202) 208-6123.

A call to any of these resources will likely result in identifying additional local resources to assist you. We hope this directory will help you establish appropriate contacts for further study or information regarding Indian education.
